Robot Programmed to Throw Perfect Party

FORMERLY robots were merely mechanical devices performing small stunts under immediate human guidance, but now a new robot appears to have pre-programmed skills to assist humans in everyday activities. This robot, the creation of Dr. Otto von Wrinkelbrau, an chief inventor for Orlando-based Global Omni Corp, is declared to be able to attend to a variety of tasks for home-based entertaining.

Dr. von Wrinkelbrau has equipped his robot with functions derived from data culminated from popular recipe books, bartender's guides, and etiquette manuals. The robot performs according to the needs of a particular situation, sharing duties with human household members and halving the preparation time.

If you want to host a successful party, simply obtain a robot and put it to work.

Dr. Otto von Wrinkelbrau presenting his new party planning robot, which can prepare any kind of cocktail from the recipes stored in his mechanical brain.

More than a house... it's a lifestyle!

Glomco Introduces New System to Aid in Leisure Lifestyle

Internationally-renowned corporation Global Omni Corp announced on Tuesday its plans for an innovative new system to assist the busy housewife with entertainment in the home. The LeisureAssist program is a electrical system built into new homes and is designed to keep dinner parties and celebrations running efficiently and effectively, with effortless appearance.

The LeisureAssist system is a feature of Glomco's proposed house of the future Zükünfthaus. The company plans to erect a model home on property purchased for their new housing development—Neue Vista Estates. A smaller scale version of Zükünfthaus is scheduled for completion and presentation at Montréal's World's Fair in 1967.

THE FUTURE
IS DEAD

SAY GOODBYE TO THE SPACE AGE ERA.
THE DAYS OF AUTOMATED HOMES AND PUSH-BUTTON SERVANTS
HAVE PASSED US BY. AND WE'LL HAVE TO WAIT JUST A LITTLE LONGER FOR THOSE JET PACKS AND FLYING CARS.

Forget everything you've been told about robots. Today's youth are put off by the concept of mechanical men performing menial household tasks while the rest of the world is in turmoil. As the battle for civil rights and gender equality rages on, people feel that even the use of electronic slave labor is in poor taste. This is bad news for Xanadu, Monsanto House, and Zükünfthaus—all prototypes purporting to be the blueprint of the future and setting the standard for modern living. Each home features automated amenities to make life's little chores easier.

House of the Future Now Thing of the Past

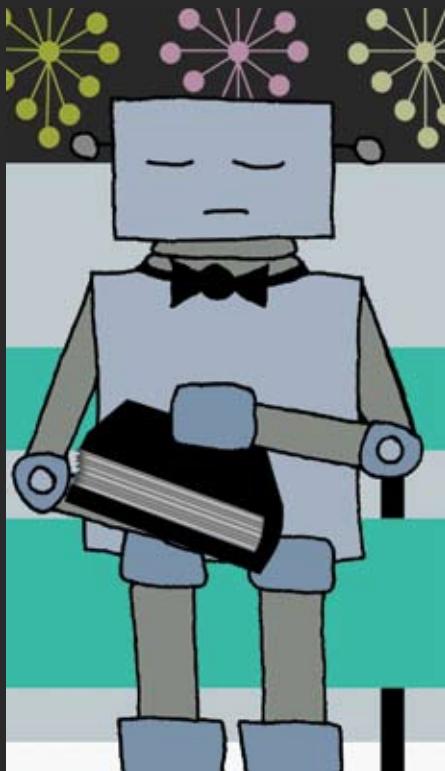

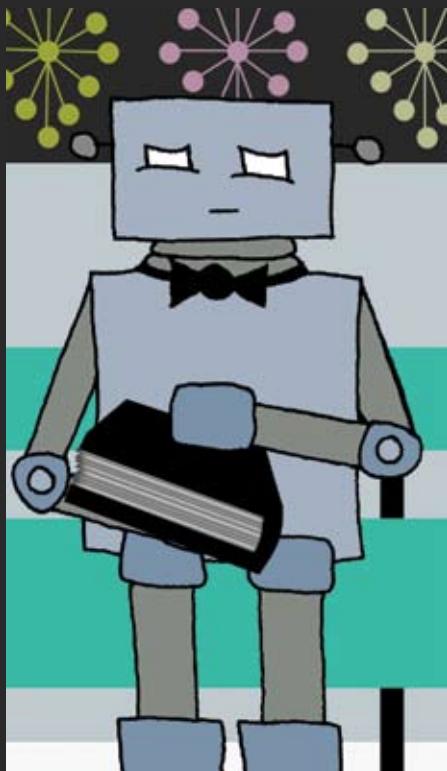

What was once considered the everyman's dream home, Zükünfthaus is scheduled for demolition. The model home was constructed and promptly abandoned as its parent company Glomco shifted focus from space age fantasies of the '60s to the realities of war in the '70s. Glomco built the home to lure potential homeowners to Neue Vista Estates, a planned community for snowbirds and vacationeers. The land was purchased for its proximity to popular local amenities and attractions. Completed construction on a major highway bypassed this once desirable area.

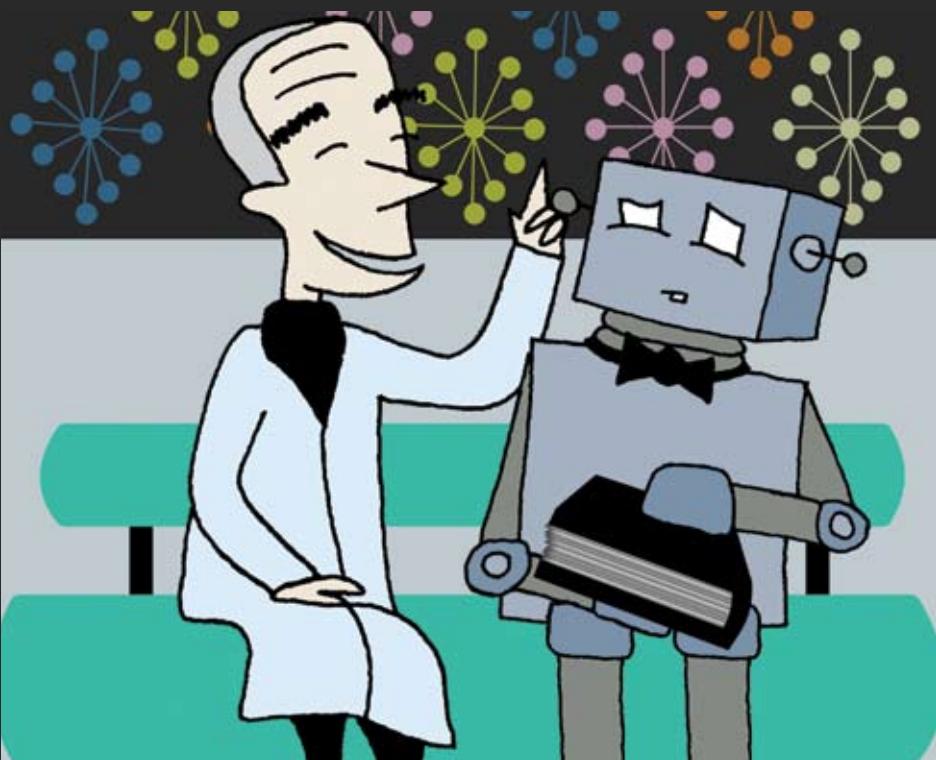

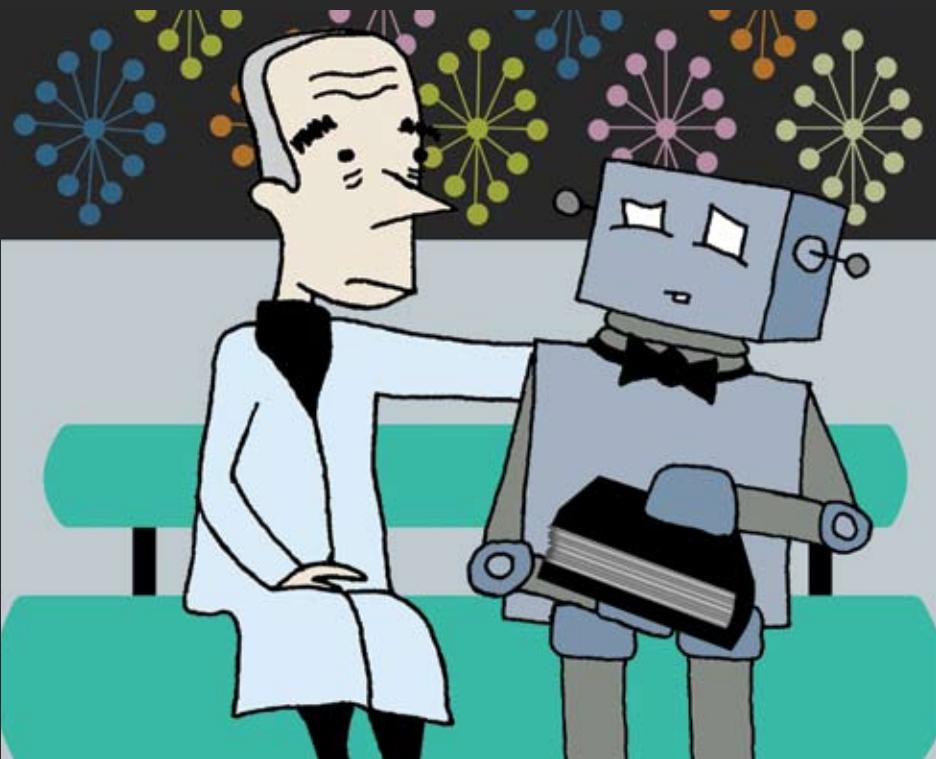

The model house has sat vacant on the large parcel of land for nearly 40 years. Glomco—now facing several consecutive quarters of losses and layoffs—recently sold the land to foreign investors who plan to build a luxury resort with golf courses and a convention center designed to lure big business for corporate retreats and conferences.

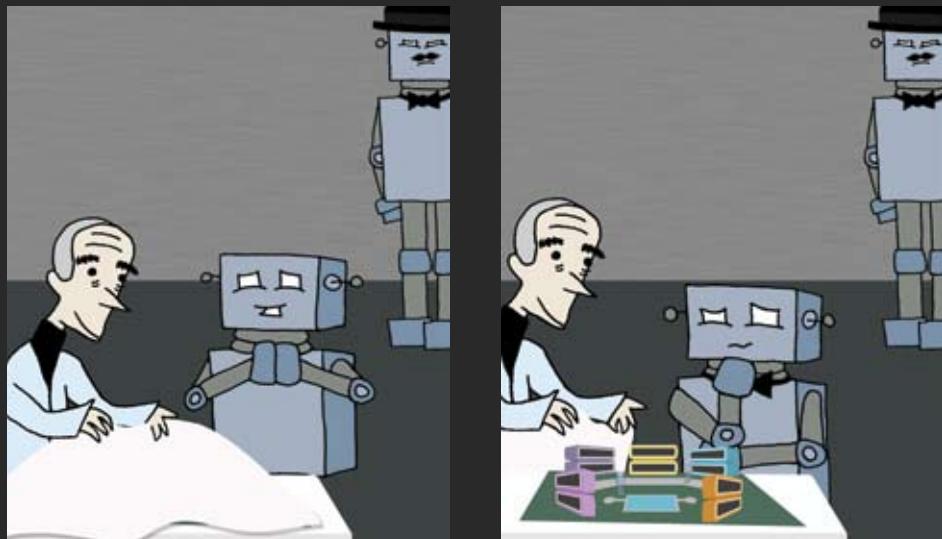

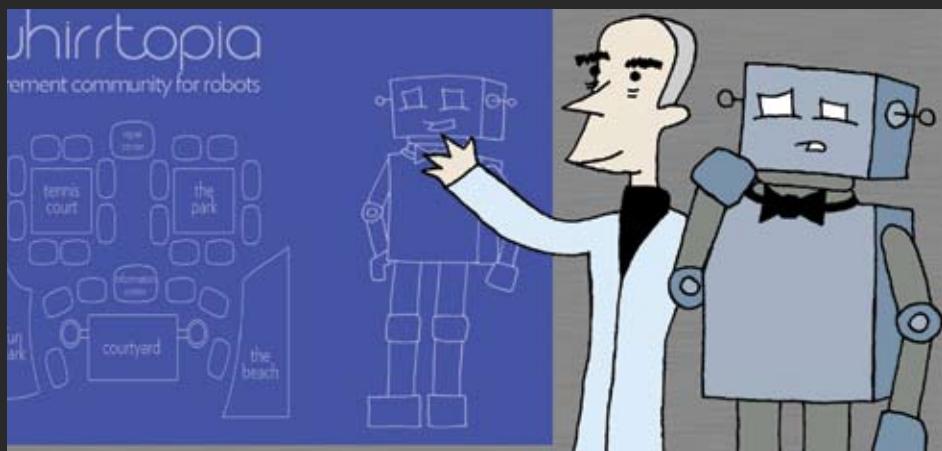

Zükünfthaus, an abandoned "house of the future" to be demolished to make way for luxury resort.
